THE EVENING BULLETIN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION IN THIS CITY, CHESTER AND ABERDEEN, OHIO, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER PUBLISHED IN MAYSVILLE.

The Mississippi river is falling all the way from Cairo to below Vicksburg.

ANDREW J. TULLIS was convicted of forgery at Cincinnati, Saturday, by the Court of Common Pleas.

In both branches of the Illinois Legislature resolutions were presented asking the President to pardon Sargeant Mason.

An exchange very pertinently remarks that President Arthur is like the Yankee's powder—slow but dreadfully sure—to get a Stalwart in when the time comes.

The Stalwart St. Louis Globe-Democrat advises the Half-breed organs to suspend their abuse of Conkling for a while and tackle those Garfield letters. There is food for thought in the latter.

E. V. SMALLEY, formerly of the New York Tribune, who has recently been in Ohio, is not inclined to take a very hopeful view of "the political situation in that State. He says the people must be stirred up considerably if the State is to be carried by the Republicans this fall.

A PENNSYLVANIA paper remarks: "It's all right with President Arthur's clothes, they fit him, but he ought to have his measure taken for another chair; the one that Jefferson occupied is altogether too big for him." The paper is mistaken. The chair Arthur occupies is Hayes' old one, not Jefferson's.

In the petition to Congress of the Maimed Soldier's Association of Philadelphia, for an increase of pensions, they say that the Surgeon's General's report for 1881 shows that the annual mortality among the maimed soldiers and sailors during the period from 1875 to 1880 has been thirty-one and twenty-five hundredths per thousand, and that it is believed that the average age of maimed soldiers cannot be greater than forty-five years. The actuary tables of mortality in use by insurance companies show that the death rate per thousand of those who reach the age of sixty years is but thirty and thirty-three hundredths, so that it appears the loss of a limb shortens life about fifteen years, a fact which tells of sufferings which words cannot.

Editorial Negligence.

There is a young editor wandering on the face of the earth who formerly published a paper at Storm Lake, Iowa. He left there the day after the issue of the last paper, and is supposed to be crossing the State on foot to get away from an infuriated female population. It seems there was a concert given by the young ladies of the city, and the gallant young editor wrote it up in splendid shape. The same day he had visited a herd of short-horn cattle owned by a farmer in the vicinity, and he wrote up the cattle also. The cross-eyed foreman of the office got the two articles mixed up as follows: "The concert given last evening by sixteen of Storm Lake's most beautiful and interesting young ladies was highly appreciated. They were elegantly dressed, and sang in most charming manner, winning the plaudits of the entire audience, who pronounced them the finest short-horns in the county. A few of them are of a rich brown color, but the majority are spotted brown and white. Several of the heifers were fine-bodied, tight-limbed animals, and promise to prove good property. Their limbs were shapely, and their movements graceful. They must prove good breeders, and the farmer who secures them may well smack his lips."

The London Observer says of Longfellow: "Since the death of Byron, no living English poet has enjoyed so wide a popularity as Longfellow."

A disastrous fire occurred Sunday at Richmond, Va., several large tobacco factories and railroad property being destroyed. Loss about $500,000. One life was lost.

The Ohio Auditor of State will commence suit in the Supreme Court Tuesday against Auditor Cappeller, of Hamilton requiring him to show cause why $3,000,000 was dropped from the tax duplicate of Hamilton county in 1881.

Chas. E. Gordon, of the firm of Gordon & Hopkins, commission merchants of Indianapolis, who has recently been in charge of a branch house in Philadelphia, absconded from the latter place after disposing of the firm's property.

A New Orleans dispatch says: "Fordache Levee, Bayou Grosse Tete, is broken in many places, and the whole Grosse Tete sugar district will be submerged. The people hope to save their horses and mules but the cattle, sheep and hogs will all be lost."

The Republican members of the Ohio Legislature will hold a caucus some time early this week to consider the matter of adjournment. Not more than two weeks longer will be spent there unless the investigation now going on should demand an extension of time.

A Murderer's Prosperity.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mr. Edward Stokes, the gifted citizen of New York, who hid in a dark hotel passage and boldly assassinated Jim Fisk, is now part proprietor of the Hoffman House in New York City. He is said to be worth over $1,000,000, and there is not a comfort or pleasure of life that is not his. While serving in the penitentiary on account of his indiscretion in the Fisk matter, he patented and perfected a new style of street pavement. When he returned to the busy world he sold his invention to San Francisco people and went into the mining business. His schemes all realized beautifully, and now he is a darling millionaire. Mr. Stokes is a murderer with a brand on his brow more frightful than the one stamped upon the forehead of the fratricidal Cain. If he has a conscience the slaughtered Fisk must pursue him with unceasing and unrelenting fury. And yet he is prosperous and powerful. Perhaps the moral story books are wrong in the theory that the men who shed blood in hatred are marked by fate and are never allowed a share of good luck. Perhaps, after all the wages of sin are not death, at least not sudden death.
